Let's Keep Right on Hollering

DURING the war years we Canadians spent so much time talking about our exalted role as an "interpreter" between the Powers that it's a shock to discover the Big Powers are interested in neither our opinions nor our advice.

It's unnecessary to write that, although they may be hurt about that our statesmen have no criticism of referring to a career to talk.

Ottawa has taken the line that if the Big Powers won't listen to us formally, take specific note of what we have to say and let it go into the records of the press conferences they will still take every new right to stand up on the benches and raise national flags.

Lester B. Pearson, the new Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, was undoubtedly speaking with the understanding of the Government when he stated that the most dangerous period of all is a period in the dealings of brotherly.

If the big powers in the United Nations make us responsible for the proceedings in the extension of the smaller nations, history will surely renege itself into another war. There is sound common sense as well as plenty of historical evidence, to support Mr. Pearson's view.

Lester doesn't share the Canada Defense Staff and Board would necessarily write a better press than Russia the United States Great Britain and France. Lester does desire that if the statesmen who represent only half a billion of the world's people try to shape the world without any effective reference to the statesmen who represent the world's other billion and a half people, they are likely to leave those people dissatisfied for every new step they make.

To suggest our own remarks at a few years ago press on it private property. We hope Ottawa will go right on noting that the point be recognized.

The War (of 1837) Is Over

THERE is a moment on foot in Ottawa to take notice of the Canadian — notably Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier — of the duties of public politicians and bring them into the public domain.

The founder who prefers to be anonymous for the general, as a Canadian did enough to remember the later administration of Sir John A. and the early ones of Sir Wilfrid. He remains here very well the first time he met Sir Wilfrid, he was a very small boy and Sir Wilfrid spoke in French, and was a great impression.

The same boy who had been brought up a Tory, went home and told his mother, "You know it's not true what they say about it."

Wilfrid Laurier. They say he's a Gink. Well, I met him today and he isn't a Gink at all, he's a very nice man.

Great Canadian politicians of the past are still thought of as great Liberals or great Conservatives, often too simply as great Canadians. Many political movements in the country, for the past hundred years, is treated and it will still be.

We know at least one politician who would like it back never, especially in his native Ontario, that his grandfather thought so the rebel rule in 1837. His himself never returned to the fact, but he thinks the veterans' life is.

By the same token it's part of Prime Minister King's political strength in Quebec that he is the grandson of a rebel.

Respect for history is not thing; homage to history is another. Canada as a nation of it, it still fighting not only the 1837 rebellion, but a flock of other battles. In the Maritimes they're still fighting Confederation; the West is still fighting the abolition of 1838 and 1812, and Ontario's battle runs from the rebellion to the Battle of Waterloo.

It's about time we stopped doing this. One way to do it would be to treat our great men as truly national figures, and not as party leaders.

Why Not a Canadian Car?

AN APPROPRIATE question for All Poles? Or any other day. Why don't we have a Canadian automobile with special features to deal with special Canadian conditions?

What about a heating device inside the engine so that the car will start after standing a while in subzero weather?

What about Canadian tires to deal with snow conditions? Cleats were evidently devised by people who don't have to put them on very often.

What about an emergency braking system which won't wear up when the weather jumps from freezing wet to too hot?

What about having, as a standard equipment, a heating system which will keep passengers in the back seat from freezing?

What about a device to keep the all-important mirrors in motion from freezing over?

What about a little more clearance between fenders and fenders over the ground? The low-swinging wheels look fine, and are a bare necessity, they are flat, but they were never used for backing down a driveway after a heavy fall of snow.

The Ottawa Citizen raised this point a couple of months ago, when the Government was before men and the, they were as first days. Spring has taken the spring out of it, but certainly not the reality.

Got Those "Whisk-Broom" Blues?

IN THE Editors' Confidence

EVERY one of us seems to agree that the best of our country is in the hands of a few. But what if we could only have been written by a reporter and published in a major newspaper?

Mr. Cressman qualifies admirably in both respects. He is a member of the English weekly, New Brunswick and New Brunswick, and, although seemingly a local character, is one of the most influential members of the British House of Commons. It was he who said the word "brave" of John M. P. against the foreign policy of Lester B. Pearson, and it was he who wrote the article he wrote about a lot of things.

Mr. Cressman's attitude and experience are in the middle of the road. He has written some books on government and on the world, and he is a member of the House of Commons. He is a member of the House of Commons, and he is a member of the House of Commons.

In 1940 he was really in a bad way. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man.

He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man.

He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man. He was a man and a man, and he was a man and a man.

Dismissing games, books and travel, I have to say that I am a member of the House of Commons. I am a member of the House of Commons, and I am a member of the House of Commons.

I am a member of the House of Commons, and I am a member of the House of Commons. I am a member of the House of Commons, and I am a member of the House of Commons.

Nova Scotia GATEWAY TO CANADA

Site of the first permanent settlement in Canada, Nova Scotia today has a population of 600,000 people on its 21,068 square miles. Although best known for its fishing industry, its agricultural income is 50 million dollars a year, and the value of its manufactures doubles that figure. Canada's leading gypsum producer, Nova Scotia also supplies one-third of her coal from its Cape Breton mines.

Here, as throughout Canada, there are vast resources to challenge the industry and initiative of well-trained young Canadians. The meeting of that challenge can only result in rich rewards, and an increasing market for Canadian products and services.

No country in the world today can match the opportunities offered by The New Horizons of Canada Unlimited.
